WAS THIS A MURDER? NEW YORK YACHT CLUB DAY. FOUGHT OVER MRS. PARTRIDGE BIORLD:

There Is a Mystery About the Drowning of Annie Shay.

She Was with a Drinking Party in a Canal-Boat.

Jeremiah Cronin's Story Starts a Police investigation.

The police of the Madison street sta tion this morning began the investigation, upon a report made to them by an 'Evening World" reporter, of what may prove to have been a murder.

At 11 o'clock last night, according to the best information obtainable, a girl named Annie Shay, who seemed to have no home, was drowned in the slip north of old pier 36, East River. How she fell into the water is as ye

Part of this story was quite generally discredited by those who heard it, and the consensus of opinion was that Cronin was one of the canni-boat party.

Asked what he saw or did on returning to the pier, Cronin said:

"I saw two girls, Annie Brown and Nell Foley running away. They told may that Annie Shay had fatten off the pier and been drowned. I got into the boat but there was no one aboard. I jumped into the water and searched along the pier and boats, but didn't see anything of the body."

The man who was assaulted left the hospital during the forehoon, although he was advised not to. Before he left he told the clerk that his right name was Dr. Willis W. Proseus, of 32 West Thirty-first street he was assaulted is Ntl. by Mrs. Fanny A. Partridge, the flour merchant, who was a prominent member of the Produce Exchange.

Mrs. Partridge obtained considerable notoriety a short time ago, when she caused the arrest of Lawyer George W. Dease and a man named James Keyes, who she accused of obtaining property from her by fraud.

She claimed that Keyes had dosed her with whiskey in a hotel at Utica and that Dease got her to sign away lands in the Adirondacks valued at 350,990, She began suit against Dease, and the case came up before Judge McLennen, of Herkimer, who fined Dease, and the sake cailed for June 20.

Mrs. Partridge was seen at her home this morning. She said that Dr. Proseus had his office in her front pairo until and his office in her front pairo until and his office in her front pairo until a Mrs. Partridge was left, $7,000 by her husband on condition that she did not marry again. She has had plenty of one of them.

Last night Mrs. Partridge met Dr. Proseus in a drug store. He told her had Lane was after her money, and she told Lane about it.

It was after 1 o'clock this morning when the door rang the bell. Lane opened the door and had some words with the doctor, and concluded by throwing him downstairs.

While telling her story Mrs. Partridge cried and laughed at times.

The courses were the Sandy Hook and Scotland Light respectively, for the larger and smaller boats. The conmittee in charge of the regatta was S. Nicholson Kane, Chalirman; Chester Griswold and Irving Grinnell.

All forenoon the annoying mist continued to hang over the lower bay like a great moist blanket, and this, with the mereat capful of wind which prevailed, made it apparent to sightseers at Fort Hamilton that a start, even at noon, an hour beyond the announced time, was highly improbable.

However, ancient mariners, who are as thick as apple-blossoms in Fort Hamilton, declared that when the sun had passed meridian, there would be a wholesail breeze which would send the boats along in true recing fashion.

The first gun preparatory to the start was fred from the figs-hp May 1 11.55 o'clock. The second gun sounded at 12.05, and that was the starting signal for the slopes.

The Hildegarde, which was hovering about the line, pointed her nose towards the stakeheat, and she was the first to cross on her way ever the shorter course.

The third gun was fired at 12.10. It was the signal for the schooners to start. The Lasca was the leader in this class to bowl over the line.

He was arrested on the information of Charles N. Newell, who was arrested last week for having smuggled phenacatine and sulphonal at Suspension Bridge. Newell waived examination, and was held in $1,000 bail.

Now he makes an affidavit that he sold the drugs to Dill.

Newell, however, did not get his money from Dill, and turned informer. Newell is now out on bail.

Both parties to the suit are wealthy Brooklynites and prominent members of the Union League Club.

Mr. Lazarus claims that in November, is 31, he met Mr. Sands at the Union League Club.

Mr. Lazarus salums that well unimproved property to sell. The price set was $14,000.

Mr. Lazarus gave the order to Mr. Sands & Edgerton, real estate brokers, and they delivered over the deeds, receiving, it is alleged, $14,000.

Subsequently Mr. Lazarus claims to have discovered that the property had been sold for $12,000.

He claims that the $2,000 difference was divided as profit between the two brokers.
